PARENT INVOLVEMENT

Continuing on the Path to Marksmanship

“Kids develop a positive self-image by mastering a skill such as shooting. They also learn to work as a team, and by doing so gain social skills and learn to respect others. Learning to appreciate an active lifestyle through the shooting sports can become a lifelong activity.

As parents you have the opportunity to help build your child’s self-esteem by emphasizing skill development and keeping winning in perspective—all while cheering them on, staying positive and not pushing them too much.”<sup>1</sup>

Parents should be involved. As in any sport, the coach or instructor cannot do it all. There are many things a parent can help with such as: participation sponsored programs (BORCC, Appleseed, CMP, and others) and family shooting activities. This page lists some activities that parents and youth do.
